Cristina: Could you tell us a little more about Rurh? Of his position as leader or king.

Anéeka of Temmer: He is naturally albino, like his father, that is, he does not dye his hair white. He is a white lion. Ruhr is a young lion from the royal dynasty, recently crowned, it will only be about two or 3 years, replacing his old father who still lives. He is like Alenym, exercising in a highly conflictive area so he can know how to reign well at home. The Urmah of Avyon observe a High Council of Civilization using royalty as role models and as representatives to other races when appropriate, however as in the case of Alenym, they also have much political and decision-making power.

They have a very marked influence with Taygeta here because there has been communication and cooperation between both races already for millennia, where the King or Queen is taken as an incarnation of everything that the entire civilization represents, all compressed into a single individual.

He has at his disposal an entourage of wise men who guide him, more than anything while he is new and young, but as he advances in his qualities and abilities, the counselors are withdrawn depending on his specialty, until it’s only the King or the Queen. Ruhr still has at least 5 of these wise guides with him, but he's still the one making the decisions. This concept of King with wise men together to guide him can be seen on Earth in the legend of King Arthur and Merlin.

Estel·la: At what age has his father retired?

Anéeka of Temmer: I have no way of knowing or calculating that, but to human understanding it will be about 750 years old. But I speculate. He is very old and gave his position to his son.

Cristina: And how old is Rurh?

Anéeka of Temmer: Again I don't know, but he's young, the human equivalent of someone in his 20s. And it has his wise guides together with him who are very old.

Cristina: How many Urmah are in the team in orbit?

Anéeka of Temmer: I don't have the exact number, but as I remember the number is around 3500.

Estel·la: The Urmah’s that you met, what positions did they have?

Anéeka of Temmer: I met Ruhr, and met fighter pilots like Istshi, their onboard cook, Gor'yo, who is another lion but orange. Hence his guards, and some of the maidens (cats) but I don't know what positions they would have.

Their names are more than two syllables, but in order not to be mistaken I prefer to investigate it. Because sometimes they start to lengthen their name and it is difficult for it to stick to you. The one who knows them the most is Yázhi. But they sound sweet.

Like Ist'shi, but that's like compressed.
See'ma, one of the cats. I hope to pronounce it well because I don't know how to spell that, but as in SE'ma, See'ma, not as in Si'ma.
It'si, another female cat.

Cristina: And within the Urmah team they have positions similar to yours or do you think they are more specialized in other fields?

Anéeka of Temmer: Yes, very similar because in themselves, they do not usually specialize, they only instruct themselves in everything they can. And then, as time goes by defines in what they become more experts.

Using myself as an example, I studied everything necessary as generalities and from there I went towards what I like the most or towards where I felt more affinity. And over time, I am defining myself more in exo-politics, exo-interaction, languages and medicine.

Estel·la: What are they doing here now? Do you know when they came with more influence?

Anéeka of Temmer: Just a few months ago they came with more influence. What they declare is that they have a presence here to stop abuses that the Federation could commit, only by their presence. They refer to human abuses, but they also serve as escorts for us.

Estel·la: Do you know if the Federation also asked them to leave?

Anéeka of Temmer: Like us, they have been asked to withdraw more than once. Just like they just ignore it. The Urmah Collective is extremely large and strong.

The Urmah are very close to humanity, and that in more ways than one. If they are in a higher orbit than we are, it is for no other reason than because if they were closer, the ships could interfere. From the bridge knowing when and where to look, from there you can see the lights, and the strobes of the Urmah ship passing above us.

Cristina: And how is your communication with them?

Anéeka of Temmer: By Muon, mostly screen to screen. Language: Taygetean mostly or Andromedan. They speak with a deep snore and are a little slow to articulate, words with a purr or low frequency vibration behind. It clearly reminds you that you are talking to a big cat. Their voice is very low in frequency, with a huge thorax. Very deep and serious. And listening to them commands respect and even fear if it weren't because you know they are on your side.

Estel·la: Do they contact people telepathically? Many people claim to have contact with felines through telepathy.

Anéeka of Temmer: Yes, they definitely do that.

Cristina: And what are their intentions about contacting through the Internet like you? Is only Rurh interested or are more of them interested?

Anéeka of Temmer: For anatomical reasons they don't see it viable. Just as something very limited, almost heroic. Only Ruhr has tried.

Estel·la: In how many ships are they here?

Anéeka of Temmer: In a single large ship, it’s name on behalf of something very meaningful to them: Avyon-1. As for us, Toleka. In addition to their small ones. It is almost twice the size of the Toleka and the designs are similar, because there has been technological influence and cooperation.

But I remind you that Toleka was designed to support a crew of 1800 well. Although in this ship the general crew bedrooms, extra kitchens, support equipment such as air and temperature circulators for each room, as well as Agriculture Deck for helping to feed so many, all of that was withdrawn in favor of special equipment. And the Avyon-1 ship is in full gear.

Estel·la: And is it painted brindle? Does it have a royal emblem, too?

Anéeka from Temmer: Only on the upper deck back on the main engines, it has orange paint with black stripes. I have not seen a royal emblem, as the Toleka done does have.

Cristina: How high in orbit are they now?

Anéeka of Temmer: About 650 km/ 400 miles, we are about 480 km/ 300 miles and sometimes we go up to 500km. They are the only two major spacecraft in low orbit. The others are far away in lunar orbit, over 400,000 km / 250,000 miles from Earth. This is where the bulk of the Federation ships is found. And from other observers. Between 390,000 to 400,000 km high orbit.

Estel·la: What are their fighter ships like?

Anéeka of Temmer: The Urmah fighter ships are also very similar to ours. They look like very advanced aircraft, classic Sci-Fi ships, that is, with engines in the back and the cabin in the front. Not round/circular.

Estel·la: And do they have any adaptation in the cabin due to race, or something?

Anéeka of Temmer: For Urmah the ships are 30% more spacious and larger. So in general, the Urmah ships are similar to the Taygetean ships generalizing.

Estel·la: And do they also like to pilot in manual mode?

Anéeka of Temmer: Yes, also.

Cristina: And do they have any characteristics, for example, on the command bridge that are different from the Toleka? Due to the biological difference.

Anéeka of Temmer: Only biological adaptations and design variants according to them.
But the level of technology is comparable.

Cristina: Thank you. Any difference, for example, in the chairs or the controls?

Anéeka of Temmer: Chairs have the support on one side, with a strong arm, to leave some space for the tail.

Anéeka of Temmer: The disk/circular shape are very common but the use of the disk shape is a resource for small engines, because it distributes electromagnetic energy uniformly throughout the hull of the small ship.

They are used as cars for example, but it is considered an old design. Because we already use shuttles with easier shapes to use and store. Which are comparable to wheeled vans. These designs are already very common among races of the Federation, as their "leak" shows with these web designs.

Estel·la: And how are their uniforms like?

Anéeka of Temmer: They wear their equivalent to our "second skin" suit. But on top, their fashion, as I have already mentioned, it is very towards the classic/epic, with a lot of leather and ornamental armor. As for casual fashion, they wear something like T-shirts that use X-shaped straps instead of buttons.

Cristina: How exactly? With the straps crossed in the back?

Anéeka of Temmer: No, at the front.

Estel·la: And what is their emblem?

Anéeka of Temmer: All of their emblems have a cat or feline proudly on the front, but the royal emblem that I have seen the most is the white lion face you have already seen or lion face silhouettes. They also use claw symbols, as you would expect.

Estel·la: And behind, their constellation too?

Anéeka of Temmer: No, independent. As a single planetary symbol of them, I have not seen it or would have to ask.

Cristina: When you say a feline, do you mean a lion as an animal or an Urmah?

Anéeka of Temmer: Their face is virtually the same anyway.

Cristina: You mean just their face then right?

Anéeka of Temmer: Yes.
